

Modern Slavery in Australia

This statement is prepared for the purposes of the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth) (the Act). This statement outlines what Auto & General Insurance Company Ltd, (AGIC) (ACN 111 586 353) and its related entities, in the Australian insurance operations have done during the 2021 financial year to assess and address the risks of modern slavery in our supply chains and operations.

The related entities of AGIC that are covered under this statement are, Auto & General Holdings Pty Ltd (ACN 086 321 459), and Auto & General Services Pty Ltd (ACN 003 617 909) (AGIC Group).

The Board of AGIC has responsibility for overseeing the AGIC Group's response to modern slavery risks.

About AGIC

The AGIC Group has sold, managed and underwritten a range of insurance products in Australia since 2000.

AGIC is regulated by the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority (APRA), and we operate under an Australian Financial Services Licence granted by the Australian Securities Investment Commission (ASIC).

We are also a member of the Insurance Council of Australia and a signatory to its General Insurance Code of Practice.

We market insurance Australia-wide. Our main offices are in Toowong, Brisbane and our call centres are based in South East Queensland and Johannesburg, South Africa. We operate damage assessment centres, located in Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane.

We employ over 1,700 people, including underwriters, product managers, actuaries, call-centre consultants (covering sales service and claims), IT staff, business developers, account managers and marketing and communication specialists.

As a company, we utilise the services of over 800 suppliers and service providers. Our supply chain includes the contracting of claims related services including repairers, builders and IT suppliers and developers.

AGIC does not own any factories or manufacturing processes to source materials or supplies used in repairs. However, in our supply chain we utilise the services of approximately 200 repairers and builders all operating within Australia to deliver their services, such as motor and home repairs and restorations. These suppliers are required to source raw materials to undertake repair works.

These repairers and builders are fundamental to AGIC's core business, and also support the employment of many staff across Australia.

Risk of Modern Slavery in Our Operations and Supply Chains

All of the entities covered by this statement operate in the Insurance industry. This industry has a minimal risk of modern slavery practices.

The assessment of risk is based on the services we provide, the location of our businesses and our suppliers' businesses and the fact that our industry is highly regulated.

However, there is potentially some risk relating to outsourcing within our supply chain stemming from our builders and repairers (both home and motor). In these situations, AGIC does not have clear supervision over where these suppliers ultimately source raw materials from to undertake repair works. As such, the raw materials used in the goods and services provided by these businesses may be produced outside of Australia in industries with higher risks of modern slavery.

Separately, AGIC's People & Culture division monitors and addresses human rights issues in their operations and through employment recruitment practices. A proportion of the workforce are employed via enterprise agreements, which ensures minimum pay and entitlements. AGIC also has a number of internal policies in place that promote equality, safety, and anti-discrimination.

While these factors may not be indicative of a modern slavery risk, AGIC acknowledges the potential for labour rights issues. Accordingly, AGIC places emphasis on providing safe workplaces and consistently aspires to improve.

Our Actions in Assessing These Risks in Our Operations & Supply Chains

This year we have focussed on developing our internal processes to allow AGIC to continue to apply due diligence processes in future, with the aim of identifying and remedying any potential risks in our operations and supply chains. This has focussed on increased front-end vendor management via contractual terms and further developing our compliance program for future years.

Modern Slavery Contract Terms

There are a number of factors that inform which suppliers AGIC chooses to partner with throughout the procurement process. These include quantitative factors such as price, quality, industry experience and availability of resources, in addition to ensuring a cultural alignment in key areas such as business values, labour practices and industry best practice.

To ensure that we will be complying with the requirements of the Act we have developed contractual terms relating to modern slavery which we are now using as the standard in the procurement of new services.

The terms have the effect of ensuring our contractors commit to compliance with the Act but also place an onus on them to ensure their contractors and suppliers comply with, at minimum, these same terms.

The terms continue to be rolled out with new suppliers and in renewal contracts with existing suppliers.

Modern Slavery Training

We are placing an emphasis on modern slavery education of our staff and customers. This includes development of mandatory internal training to be rolled out in the 2022 financial year to assist all AGIC employees in understanding their obligations and aiding them to identify conduct that may raise a modern slavery risk.

Modern Slavery Public Statement

AGIC has committed to making a publicly available statement of business ethics which outlines AGIC's attitude towards modern slavery practices and its' commitment to human rights. The statement will be available via our website for customers to access. It is intended that the statement will aid customer understanding of the topic and emphasise AGIC's commitment to ethical business practices.

Modern Slavery Monitoring

In terms of monitoring, we have developed a process to assess risks and determine any changes to our key supply chains, with a targeted focus on high expenditure suppliers.

An updated modern slavery questionnaire has been developed to be rolled out in future audit periods to identified suppliers, to ensure suppliers have adequately considered their supply chains and modern slavery risk.

It is intended that the results of the questionnaire, combined with prior year results, will aid in the development of a Modern Slavery Policy and Guidelines for internal use. This will outline how AGIC complies with its modern slavery obligations, and document future steps to be taken to address risks of modern slavery.

Whistleblowing Policy

We have a Whistleblowing Policy available via our website promoting a work environment that encourages and allows employees to operate with ownership and integrity and feel safe raising matters of concern in our business. This promotion of ethical behaviour applies to our direct employees, contractors and third-party representatives of AGIC and our subsidiaries.

We have developed a stringent yet welcoming reporting process, protecting any person disclosing information, and encouraging transparency in our business. Any risk of modern slavery in our operations can easily be reported, assessed and rectified using this procedure.

Effect of COVID-19

Due to COVID-19, there has been an impact on supply chains within our motor and home repair space, due to the availability of parts and raw materials. We acknowledge there may be an increased risk of modern slavery in our operations and supply chains due to this and because of the economic uncertainty as a result of the pandemic.

Widespread lockdowns have meant we have been unable to undertake many of the usual face to face contacts with our suppliers. Whilst we were unable to meet face to face as often as desired, we have continued to maintain regular contact with suppliers via alternative means which creates opportunities for suppliers to raise concerns, including with respect to any modern slavery risks.

Assessing the Effectiveness of Our Actions

In completing this statement, we have detailed key actions taken by our business in and around assessing and minimising the risk in our operations and supply chains. Using these learnings will be vital in ensuring continuous improvement is adopted and to further assess the effectiveness of our actions to date.

To date, the inclusion of new contractual terms has raised awareness of the Act with our service providers, the vast majority of which do not have reporting obligations of their own. This has resulted in a greater level of understanding as to what potential practices may attract modern slavery risks.

Results from our first round of supplier monitoring undertaken in the 2019-2020 reporting period, have been used to refine and update the monitoring framework going forward. The mixed response rates obtained from that process may have been attributable to the complexity and number of questions being asked, of suppliers of varying sizes. As such, an updated questionnaire has been formulated, which will be used for more targeted monitoring of higher risk suppliers.

It is intended that the development of the Modern Slavery Policy and Guidelines will further refine this process.

Many of the actions proposed for the forthcoming financial year aim to improve and expand on the work undertaken to date, by creating greater awareness at a AGIC Group level of the modern slavery risks.

Engaging All Our Entities

In preparation of this statement we have sought input of all entities covered in this joint statement.

This statement has been reviewed by all of the related entities mentioned and has taken on board the actions of those entities to ensure that they have been engaged in its completion.

All related entities of AGIC operate in the same industry and have similar exposure to the risks of modern slavery. The actions and consultation taken by each entity has been reflective of the relationships in our group and the risk profiles of those entities.
